

ENGLISH WIDENS MANY PATHWAYS

Above: "My senior class went one week without overdue library notices."
Mr. Danner

The English Department this year spent the majority of its time on reading great novels, poetry, and plays. The Sophomores read "Silas Marner" while the Juniors enjoyed "The Scarlet Letter," "Fountainhead," and "Grapes of Wrath." A research paper also provided a pastime for the Juniors. All this was an appropriate initiation to the new humanities wing whose facilities were put to thorough use. One group of Seniors was introduced to the new English teacher, Mr. Danner, his poetry and discussion panels, while all of the Seniors read and analyzed Hamlet, Macbeth, and a few modern novels.

Right: Teacher and scholar are dependent on each other. Mrs. Vinton

Below: Lord of the flies, Mike Haedike.

