Mary Rydell displayed her poise on the balance beam.

"Take that!" G.A.A. girls release their energy on a basketball.

Again this year, G.A.A. increased substantially in membership by providing field hockey, volleyball, basketball, badminton, archery, softball, tennis, track, and bowling for the girls after school. This year five girls from W.H.S. went to leadership camp and returned with some new ideas, such as G.A.A. Playday for girls in elementary school and junior high, mother and daughter recreation night, and the huge, yellow mums that were sold during Homecoming. The girls were also kept busy participating in the Lake Conference archery, volleyball, basketball, and badminton tournaments.

Although the World Affairs Club didn't get started until late in the fall, it had a very interesting and successful year under the direction of president, Bob Hunt and advisor, Mr. Harmon. Among the topics discussed at the meetings were juvenile delinquency and L.S.D. The club also enjoyed some influential speakers, one of whom was Salisbury Adams. The guest list included many foreign students. When two girls from Africa came to visit during Easter vacation, the club was invited to meet and talk with them. In the Spring they took a tour of the Minneapolis Work House, which was an excellent climax to the year.
